1611 N. Kent Street
Arlington, VA 22209

Conveniently located just across the Key Bridge from Georgetown, the Rosslyn Spectrum offers auditorium and theatre-style seating for 387 people, an ideal size for conferences, lectures and multi-media presentations. A vibrant performing arts venue offering live theatre and music in the evenings and on most weekends, the Arlington Cultural Affairs Division is delighted to make this versatile space available for daytime meeting rentals, and occasional evening and weekend events on an "as available" basis.

The Rosslyn Spectrum has wide aisles and folding writing desks at each upholstered seat, and offers many of the comforts of better known facilities at very reasonable rates. The glass-walled lobby gallery features exhibitions by regional artists, and is ideal for small receptions. The lobby also may be configured for smaller sessions or breakout discussions.

Fully compliant with ADA accessibility standards, the Rosslyn Spectrum is located beside the old Newseum building, which is being renovated as Arlington's new Cultural Center, and just two blocks from the Rosslyn Metro Station (orange and blue lines) in the heart of one of the Washington, DC region's fastest growing professional and commercial centers.
